OUTCOME OF BROTHER AND SIS-TER PARTING AS BABES.

A STORY STRANGER THAN FIGURE.

Deserted in New York, Separated, but Brought Together Again.

THEY FINALLY MARRY AND INHERIT.

A Letter, Written After the Waif and Painter's Apprentice Had Grown to Manhood, Unravels a Mystery.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 11 -- A startling story is told by Detective Matson of London, Ont., concerning a young married couple, whose recent residence was Double and Single-breasted in Ransas City, Ran. Matson arrived in this city on Saturday in search of Asa and Louisa Barr, who are not only husband and wife, but brother and sister and beirs to a vast fortune in England. The circumstances surrounding the case are very peculiar, and the detective fact that we can fit them as was sent here by friends of the young couple, who had discovered their whereabouts, to notify them of the sad plight.

> THE DETECTIVE'S STORY. At the Hotel Barker, in Kansas City, Kan., yesterday afternoon, Detective Matson revealed the details of the story. "About twenty four years ago," said the detective, "two deserted babes said the detective, "two deserted babes were found by the police in Castle Garden and turned over to the Home of the Friendless in New York city. Evidently the two were twins, for besides looking exactly alike (one being a girl and the other a boy), a note was found in a basket left with the children stations on and also that the children stations of the stations ing so, and also that they were I year

COULDN'T TRACE THE PARENTS. "This was all the information that was to be had. Consequently their parents could not be traced. They remained in the Home of the Friendless until they were about 3 years of age, when they were adopted by two ladies who were visiting the institution. The girl was adopted by Mrs. Margaret Scott, a widow, and the boy by Mr. and Mrs. James Barr. These two families being neighbors in the city of New York, the children were practically reared together until they arrived at the reared together until they arrived at the

rge of 4 years.

The Barr family then moved to Philadelphia, and by reason of broken fortunes soon moved away from there, going to London, Ont. By reason of their reduced circumstances it was found necessary for them to part with their adopted son, whom they had named Asa, and accordingly he was turned over to the Home of the Friendless in Philadelphia. WITH A PHILADELPHIA PAINTER. "Two years later young Asa was taken into the family of a painter, whose name I do not recollect, and following in the footsteps of his adopted father he became a painter by trade. About a year ago, according to a letter written by him to James Barr recently, he married a young lady named Louisa Scott, with whom he removed to Kansas City, Kan, on account of ill-health. While working at his trade in that city, he formed the acquaintance of a fellow-painter, who seems to have informed him that James Barr and family lived in London, Out. Remembering his early adoption, young Barr wrote a letter to that address, stating how be had become possessed of the knowledge that such a man lived in the city, and asked him if he was not the same James Barr who had adopted a little boy in New York city over twenty years ago whom he had christened Asa. If so, he wished to inform him that that soy had grown to manhood and married, and was the writer of the letter. THE STUNNING FEATURE. "The letter also stated that he had married Louisa Scott, giving the time and place of marriage. James Barr received the letter and answered the same, admitting that he had adopted such a boy and stating that if his story was true he should come to London immediately, as matters of pertaining to himself and his wife were at his disposal. In all probability the young couple have gone to Ontario, as they left Kansas City, Kan., about a werk ago. "In order to get to the facts it will be. necessary to state that the Barr family.

after taking up their residence in Ontario restored their fallen fortunes and began at once to search for their adopted boy, with what result the reader now knows as well as they.

Their inquiries, it seems, resulted in nothing except an attorney's story of how the twin waif. Louisa Scott, had grown to young womanhood and became a music teacher in Philadelphia: but then, very recently, they got that letter from Asa Barr, telling of the startling denougment. It was from an unex-pected leheritance in England left to Mrs. Scott, Louisa's fester mother, that
